Marriott criticizes Carter

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

"I think the whole world, including the Congress, has no idea of what President Carter's foreign policy is, and if for no other reason I think President Carter should be removed from office in the 1980 election," Congressman Dan Marriott, R-Utah, said Thursday.

In an interview with The Daily Universe, Marriott said he liked Carter personally but felt his foreign policy was in "shambles."

"His foreign policy advisors are all the old McGovernites," he said. "They are very liberal and I don't think they know what they are doing."

Marriott, who just returned from a trip to Taiwan, was very critical of Carter's decision to normalize relations with China.

"I think he did a poor job in relationships with Taiwan," Marriott said. "There is no question that we would all like to see a better relationship with the People's Republic of China but I don't think we had to do it by giving away everything and getting no concessions in return."

"I agree that we should do something with China," Marriott continued, "but I think we should maintain a defense program with Taiwan, get a Peking guarantee that they will not impose an economic embargo on Taiwan and try to talk Taiwan into becoming an independent country, rather than holding out as the only government of all of China."

Marriott said the normalization also had an effect on SALT II and U.S. relations with the Soviets. The Soviet Union is taking a "dim" view of the new relationship, and it would not be surprising to see them delay the SALT negotiations, Marriott said.

"The Russians are going to be hard to live with now, simply because they are looking at a U.S.-China coalition," he said.

Marriott said Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-p'ing is only using the U.S. as a lever against the Soviets and should not be trusted.

The United States won't even acknowledge some countries because of their positions on human rights, Marriott added. "But the greatest violator of human rights is Teng," he told students in a political science class, "and even the Osmonds are singing for him.

Congressman Dan Marriott speaks to students in Political Science 310, taught by J. Keith Melville, Department of Government. Marriott criticized Carter's foreign policy and described Teng Hsaio-p'ing as "the greatest violator of human rights."

"Once he gets our arms and our trade and builds a few more missiles, then he will be hard to live with."

Marriott was further disturbed by fellow Republicans who saluted the new relations with Red China. "I am definitely hurt that even Kissenger, Nixon and Ford were willing to jump on the bandwagon and abandon our 30-year-old ally," he said.

Although personally dissatisfied with Carter's foreign policy, which he hopes will be debated in this year's Congress, Marriott said the main issue of the entire Congress will be cutting inflation. He cited welfare and Social Security reform as the most important inflationary issues.

Marriott spoke positively about Utah's congressional delegation.

"Jake Garn is establishing himself and making a good mark for himself," he said, adding that Congressman Gunn McKay, D-Utah, does a good job of pleasing both the Democratic leaders in Washington and the people back in Utah; and Senator Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has made some "good friends and some bad ones."

Marriott described himself as a freshman, just trying to learn how to be a better legislator.

Concerning further political ambitions, Marriott said, "I have had a lot of people ask me to come back and run for governor. But I'm happy to be the congressman and I think this is a very important job."

In describing the people who put him in office, Marriott said Utah voters are smarter than people think they are, and are probably more aware than citizens of other states.

"Unfortunately there is a large silent majority, and the special one-interest groups make all the noise and get all the publicity," Marriott said.

Khomeini returns to Iran from exile

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini, the voice from afar who rocked Iran into ousting the shah, came home triumphantly from 14 years of exile Thursday.

He challenged the shaky government and warned Americans and others he will "cut the hands" of foreign influence over this nation.

Pandemonium welcomed the frail, white-bearded hero of the anti-shah revolution back to his homeland.

More than a million ecstatic Iranians, chanting "Allah Akhbar!" ("God is great"), cheered the 78-year-old Moslem patriarch as he rode into Tehran after flying from France, ending his 14-year exile and climaxing a year-long protest that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi out of the country.

Khomeini immediately set the stage for a showdown with the government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, and possibly with the army.

"I am going to establish a government with the backing of this nation," he told hundreds of thousands of supporters at a rally in the main Tehran cemetery, burial place of many "martyrs" of the bloody antishah upheaval.

He denounced as illegal the monarchy, the shah-endorsed Bakhtiar government and the national Parliament. He accused the shah of "despotism" and vowed the monarch and his associates will never come back to Iran.

"There cannot be a country with two governments, so the illegal (Bakhtiar) government has to get out," he declared. Khomeini wants to establish a religiously oriented but vaguely defined Islamic republic.

In a radio address Wednesday night, Bakhtiar defied Khomeini's claims to leadership, declaring, "The government will not permit the reins of the country to be held by anyone except the central government."

Khomeini damned Iran's foreign military advisers, many of whom are American.

"Our victory can be achieved only when the hands of these foreigners are shortened," he said in an airport arrival speech. "... I thank you all and beg the Almighty to cut the hands of foreigners."

Bakhtiar's 27-day-old government, which has Washington's endorsement, issued no official statements as Khomeini hopscotched across Tehran by helicopter and limousine through the wildly enthusiastic crowds. The nation's armed forces, whose commanders have pledged to protect Bakhtiar, also kept a low profile, even providing a military helicopter to Khomeini.

The government television broadcast of Khomeini's arrival stopped after only 20 minutes and a picture of the shah appeared on the screen. The break-off was not fully explained.

At the cemetery, Khomeini had been expected to announce his plans for an "Islamic Revolutionary Council" to lead the nation toward an Islamic republic. But a top Khomeini aide, Mehdi Bazargan, told reporters Khomeini shelved the idea in favor of undisclosed "measures" to achieve the same result.

Military officers have threatened to move against Khomeini as soon as he takes one step against the constitution.

Besides the government and the army, Khomeini must also deal with many in the anti-shah political opposition who have sided with him but now want establishment of a non-religious republic.

During his long years in exile — in Turkey, Iraq and France — Khomeini managed to hold the loyalty of legions of followers in Iran through taped messages smuggled into the country and through constant telephone contact orchestrating the mass demostrations and strikes that undermined the shah's rule.

He arrived here on a chartered Air France jumbo jet, sleeping on carpets on the floor of the first-class lounge.

Afterward, Khomeini flew to central Tehran and went to the house of a relative. He and his staff of some 500 are to stay in a converted Moslem girls' school here for several days before traveling to the holy city of Qom.

Elder Hunter to be speaker at fireside

Elder Howard W. Hunter, a member of the LDS Council of the Twelve, will speak at BYU's 14-stake fireside Sunday.

The fireside will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center. The public is invited to attend, said J. Robert Driggs, president of the BYU 5th Stake and host for the fireside.

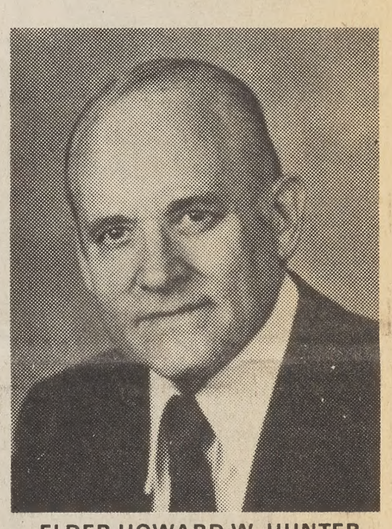
The talk will be broadcast live over KBYU-FM radio and will be telecast over KBYU-TV, Channel 11, at 9 p.m. Sunday.

Elder Hunter, a former member of the BYU Board of Trustees and a recipient of an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from BYU in 1976, was a prominent southern California attorney and businessman before his call to the Council of the Twelve on Oct. 10, 1959.

A native of Boise, Idaho, Elder Hunter moved to California in 1928. He completed undergraduate requirements and attended Southwestern University Law School in Los Angeles, graduating cum laude in 1939 with a Juris Doctor degree.

He practiced law in Los Angeles and became a leading corporation lawyer in that area.

Elder Hunter is on the board of directors of BYU's New World Archaeological Foundation and has served as president of the Polynesian Cultural Center in Hawaii and the LDS Genealogical Society.



ELDER HOWARD W. HUNTER
. . . 14-stake fireside speaker.

For many years Elder Hunter was connected with scouting programs. He has served the church in various positions, including president of the Pasadena California Stake and chairman of the Southern California and Los Angeles Welfare Regions.

Enrollment declines

The lines around campus may not look shorter, but figures show that the official enrollment at BYU has declined 3.7 percent since last semester.

Dr. Robert R. Spencer, dean of admissions and records, said 25,452 students are enrolled this semester, 965 less than the all-time high enrollment of 26,417 in the fall. This represents, however, only a 1 percent drop from last winter.

"Normally, enrollment from fall to winter semesters will drop from 1 to 3 percent," Dr. Spencer said. "This winter there is a higher percentage of students continuing from the fall semester. However, fewer freshmen and transfer students have enrolled for the winter term."

He said junior colleges are working harder to keep students enrolled longer, accounting for fewer transfers at the semester break. The official BYU report showed a decline of 201, or 16.5 percent, transfer students compared with last winter semester.

"The number of new freshmen enrolling for this winter semester dropped by 72, or 11 percent, students as compared with last winter," Spencer said. He attributed the decline to the downward trend in the number of high school graduates across the country, which he said is expected to continue until about 1985.

An enrollment ceiling of 25,000 was set eight years ago by the BYU Board of Trustees. The board has allowed the university to temporarily go over the limit to help accommodate enrollment demands of the post-war baby boom, Spencer said.

No sprinklers, no Star Palace

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

The Star Palace discotheque may be forced to close unless a fire sprinkling system is installed soon, it was disclosed in a meeting between city officials and the disco's owner Thursday.

The Provo City Commission and city zoning administrators, meeting with Brent Weeks, part-owner and manager of Star Palace, said the disco had 90 days from the time it opened to install the fire sprinkling system and bring the building into compliance with city building codes. The 90-day limit expired Jan. 13, and Weeks says the system has not yet been ordered.

The problem began when Star Palace owners applied for a building permit to remodel their present building, said Robert Bryson, city fire inspector. The original plans as presented did not necessitate a fire sprinkling system, Bryson said. However, when fire inspection officials visited the building, they decided a sprinkling system would be necessary.

"Had we known how much remodeling was going to be done, we would have required a sprinkling system from the start," Bryson said.

The city gave the owners the additional 90 days so the disco could open on schedule, he said.

David Gardner, Provo zoning administrator, said an additional time extension would depend on the outcome of upcoming negotiations between city officials and the Star Palace's owners.

"There could be a fire and lives would be lost. That would be a terrible situation," said Provo City Commissioner Anagene Meecham.

Star Palace has also had problems with their customers using the parking lots of businesses on 900 East. Robert Peay, who owns much of the land and some buildings located near the disco, said several businesses have threatened to discontinue their leases because of individuals parking in their customer parking areas.

Provo Mayor James Ferguson said a solution to the problem would have to be reached to the satisfaction of such businesses as Smith's Food King, Bogurt's Yogurt, Durfey's Dry Cleaners and Stan's Drive Inn, all located near the Star Palace.

Facts clarified in Singer death

Summit County Attorney Robert Adkins clarified a report in Wednesday's Universe that polygamist John Singer was shot from the side by a law enforcement officer on a snowmobile as he was pointing a gun at another snowmobile.

"He was pointing a gun at the officer who shot him," said Adkins. When Singer was shot, he was moving up his lane, pursued by four officers on two snowmobiles. One of the vehicles was on the south side of the lane. The Universe said he turned around while pointing his gun at one. However, Adkins clarified that Singer turned partially around, aimed the gun at the snowmobile in the lane and was shot in the right back by an officer on the snowmobile.

'More confident'

Heiress set free

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Saying she is stronger, more confident and still proud to be Patricia Hearst, the heiress-turned-bank robber bounced out of federal prison Thursday to a joyful homecoming.

"There it is — the commutation!" she said, grinning outside the prison and waving the gold-sealed document signed Monday by President Carter to cut short her seven-year bank robbery sentence.

She is a free woman for the first time in nearly five years, after being a kidnap victim, an armed bank robber, a fugitive, and finally a prisoner.

In her first moment of freedom, she rushed to her fiance, Bernard Shaw, and gave him a quick kiss on the cheek as he stood near the gate of the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton.

She told about 150 reporters that she planned to take a vacation and perhaps do some writing. Then she hopped into a station wagon with Shaw, her attorney and two bodyguards for the hour-long drive to her mother's home in Hillsborough, a posh San Francisco suburb.

There she was met by a large group of friends and family members who burst into loud applause as the car pulled into the driveway.

She showed off her green T-shirt which said: "PARDON ME."

Later she told television crews and photographers that she felt the trials of the past five years had matured her.

"I think I've gotten a lot stronger, a lot more self-confident. I take a lot of things in stride that make other people fall apart," she said.

She said she planned to take a vacation, but grinned and refused to say when or where.

"Where can you go on vacation where you wouldn't be known as Patricia Hearst?" one reporter asked. "I don't see anything wrong with being Patricia Hearst," she replied, as friends applauded.

She would have been eligible for parole July 11.

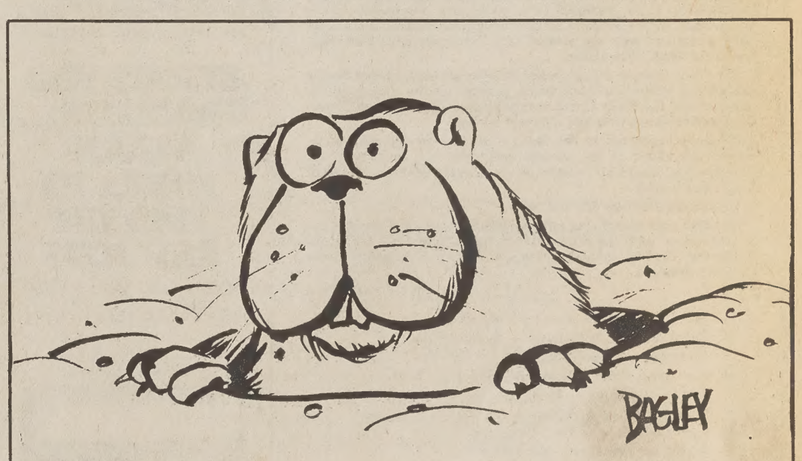
Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine, was waiting outside when her daughter came home, and hugged and kissed her as she stepped from the car. "This is the most wonderful party of my life," she said of the catered champagne brunch.

Miss Hearst's millionaire father, San Francisco Examiner president Randolph A. Hearst, arrived later and said he was able to detect a long-missing glint in his daughter's eyes.

"She has her sparkle back and I think she'll be okay," said Hearst, who was legally separated from his wife Dec. 20.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said Thursday that calls and telegrams to the White House were largely opposed to the president's decision.

Miss Hearst was a 19-year-old coed at the University of California on Feb. 4, 1974, when she was kidnapped from the Berkeley apartment she shared with her fiance, Steven Weed.



Where's my shadow?

Groundhogs across America will be popping out of their holes today. And, according to tradition, if they see their shadows, they will be scared back into their holes and we can expect six more weeks of winter.

KSL weatherman and local weather expert, Bob Welti, told the Universe, "I think the groundhog will see his shadow today." Welti KSL weatherman said today's weather forecast is for "improving" conditions, and that may cast a shadow on hopes for an early spring. But Welti said he is going against the tradition and doesn't think there will be six more weeks of winter — shadow or no shadow.

Teng Hsiao-ping visits Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Teng Hsiao-ping traded Washington and the rigors of statecraft for the frigid south on Thursday to see first-hand the American technology he covets for China's catch-up race with today's world.

Teng walked toward a small welcoming crowd at the airport outside Atlanta and shook hands in the style of an American politician on a campaign.

"I am sure that our visit in Atlanta will leave us with fine memories and that we will learn a lot from you," the Chinese vice premier said in a brief reply to Gov. George Busbee's welcoming address.

Farmers plan assault on capital

WARRENTON, Va. (AP) — A mechanized army of defiant farmers bivouaced near the Bull Run battlefield on Thursday, awaiting the arrival of a 26-mile long convoy of reinforcements to mount another assault on Washington.

Two caravans totaling more than 600 tractors and other farm vehicles, which started out from central Texas two weeks ago, rolled into campgrounds on the outskirts of the nation's capital Wednesday night. They were flying the flags of the American Agriculture movement and protesting the plight of the farmers.

Nixon, Mitchell have reunion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon had a lengthy, unannounced reunion this week with John Mitchell, who served a 19-month prison term for his part in the Watergate cover-up. "They're still good friends," said a mutual friend.

RICHARD NIXON

It was the first time the former president had seen his former attorney general, law partner and campaign manager since Mitchell was released Jan. 19 from a federal prison camp in Alabama.

They met Wednesday at a private estate near Middleburg, Va., where Nixon stayed during Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's visit to Washington. Nixon met Teng twice during the three-day official visit, the last time for nearly an hour at Teng's guest quarters across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

Slick roads slip truck

Slick roads were blamed in the roll-over wreck of a tractor-double trailer rig on Interstate-15 at 8 a.m. Thursday.

The driver of the truck, Ernest Padilla of Salt Lake City, received only minor bumps in the incident that occurred near the 400 South exit to Springville.

According to Utah Highway Patrol, the Milne Trucking Company truck was northbound when some cars ahead started to lose control on the snowy road. As the driver moved to the inside lane and braked to avoid the cars, the second trailer slid onto the median and pulled the rest of the truck with it.

STATE

Salary disclosure appealed

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A notice of appeal to ask the Utah Supreme Court to overturn a lower court order demanding public disclosure of Weber State College salaries has been filed in 3rd District Court in Salt Lake City.

Filed through the attorney general's office on behalf of the State Records Committee, the appeal asks the high court to set aside an order issued by 3rd District Judge G. Howell Taylor last month. Taylor ordered college officials to release faculty and staff salary information to John Redding, editor of the WSC student newspaper, The Signpost.

Assistant Attorney General Frank Nelson — who represents the Records Committee — has indicated that the appeal will argue that the district court decision infringed on the committee's statutory rights to declare which state records are private.

ERA divides Utah Senate

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

Opponents in the Utah Senate of a resolution opposing the ERA Thursday called Senate passage of the resolution "an underhanded attempt to keep the issue from public debate."

A move by the Senate leadership to push the resolution through shortly before the morning session ended was hotly contested by ERA proponents.

"I object to this move because there are people who should be able to hear this debate who have not even been informed that it was coming before the Senate today," Sen. Frances Farley, D-Salt Lake City, said.

Other senators said the Legislature had no right to pass a resolution telling Congress that Utah had rejected the ERA and the state was urging other state legislatures to do the the same.

"We're wasting time and the taxpayer's money," Sen. Omar B. Bunnell, D-Price, said. "This body is dead and buried and now we're going to dig it up, kick it a few times and bury it again."

Several efforts were made to postpone consideration of resolution, all of which were defeated by more than two-third the Senate. The resolution finally passed 23-5.

As the voting took place, Sen. Bunnell left the chambers refused to vote, an action prohibited by the state constitution. Ronald T. Halverson, R-Ogden called the action "a violation of oath of (senatorial) office," but no attempt was made to bring B nell back into the chambers.

Some senators voted in favor of the resolution but opposed manner in which it was put to debate.

"I am opposed to the ERA and will vote accordingly," Sen. F N. Snow Jr., R-Provo, said. "But I feel this is an improper actio

Other senators favoring the resolution made no mention ab the move.

"I'm proud to be voting in favor of a resolution opposing ERA," Glade M. Sowards, R-Vernal, and a past Speaker of House, said. "In the House I saw this thing brought back time time again and I think the people of the state have already m their feelings against the ERA known."

Backlog of tickets waits for new officer

The ASBYU Traffic Court has ground to a halt until a new attorney general is appointed by the ASBYU Executive President Perry Bratt.

According to ASBYU Commons Court officers, there is a backlog of 35 to 40 tickets, and Leo Eason, the senior justice of the ASBYU Commons Court, said 10 to 12 non-moving traffic tickets will be added to the backlog every day.

Eason blamed the ASBYU Executive Council for the problems in the judicial court system. "They should not have taken Cullimore out without immediately replacing him with someone else," he said.

Eason said students waiting to appeal tickets should write down the facts surrounding their cases so as not to forget them.

Students with the 14-day grace period on their tickets ending during the period of Jan. 30 to Feb. 16, will not be fined for late payment unless courts catch up with the backlog before that time, the court officials said.

Jurors begin deliberations on Flood bribery charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors began deliberations Thursday in the case of Rep. Daniel J. Flood, who is charged with bribery, conspiracy and perjury. They quit for the night after nearly two hours of discussion

The jury of eight men and four women is due to resume deliberations Friday morning.

In closing arguments the government's prosecutor said the time had come for "Mr. Flood to pay the piper."

Mark Tuohey, assistant U.S. attorney, said the case shows "not only a scheme of enrichment but a scheme of deniability, and it almost worked."

Axel Kleiboemer, Flood's attorney, said his client is an old man in bad health who has been accused of wrongdoing by "people who are the dregs"

Flood, a Pennsylvania Democrat serving his 16th term in the House, sat impassively at the table beside his attorneys during the closing arguments, usually with his hands folded in his lap.

Flood is charged with accepting at least $50,000 in bribes in a conspiracy scheme with his former administrative assistant between 1970 and 1976. The three perjury counts stem from Flood's denial under oath that he ever received illegal payments from anyone.

The government's key witness was Stephen Elko, who was Flood's administrative assistant. Elko, now serving two years in prison for perjury and bribery, testified he delivered about $50,000 to Flood.

Soviets ask Carter for position on Teng

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union called on the Carter administration Thursday to clarify the U.S. position toward anti-Soviet statements delivered by Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping during his state visit to Washington.

In a dispatch from the U.S. capital, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Teng's visit had been punctuated by "a whole series of speeches and statements containing slander against the Soviet Union and its policy."

A White House official said the United States seeks a "balanced relationship" with China and the Soviet Union and is "certainly not interested in prolonging or exacerbating the areas of tension" between Peking and Moscow.

State Department officials reaffirmed its intention not to tilt toward either side in the Sino-Soviet disagreement.

The Tass report marked an intensification of Kremlin criticism of the Carter administration's willingness to host Teng, who left Washington Thursday for a cross-country tour to Atlanta, Houston, and Seattle.

"Joy Through Music"

There is a need to see outside of our own isolated, narrow experiences and discover what contributions we can make to the distinctiveness of the individual, not just preserving or destroying life, but enhancing life. Music can be a humanizing experience and can be a factor that helps improve the quality of our culture. Music can give us sensitivity to our souls, feelings and expressions, and can open channels of communciation we have never before experienced. Music has the potential of assisting the self-actualization of individuals, and improving the quality of the home, Church, and higher learning.

The challenge is to bring character into the lives of men and women through the arts so that great technological achievements can be used for the betterment of mankind.

This presentation will be augmented by brief performances by the Oratorio Choir, the Philharmonic Orchestra, and a soloist.

New traffic policy reduces citations

If you are involved in a traffic accident in Provo, chances are you will not be given a citation — even if you are at fault.

As a result of a policy change made last week, the Provo Police Department will be giving fewer citations for traffic accidents.

The reason for the change, according to Provo Police Chief Swen Nielsen, "is that officers don't see most accidents, and there is very little physical evidence to enable the officer to determine who is at fault."

Nielsen said there will be exceptions to the policy, however. "If it is a highly unusual accident or one with great property damage or serious injuries," he said, "citations may be issued at the time of the accident." If it is "very clear to the officer" who was at fault, a citation will be issued, he added.

Ron Shirtz, a freshman in general studies from Simi Valley, Calif., demonstrates the difficulty that handicapped persons experiences when maneuvering around campus.

Barrier survey needs volunteers

Volunteers are needed to work on surveys for the Handicapped Awareness Program of Utah County, Kristy Rogers, vice president of ASBYU Student Community Services, said.

The "architectural barrier" survey will be conducted on 180 buildings in the Provo area to see where facilities could be made more accessible to the handicapped, Miss Rogers said.

She said some of the barriers are stairways, elevators, and doorways which are not wide enough for wheelchairs. Other problems are the accessibility of drinking fountains, light switches, mirrors and pay phones.

As part of Human Awareness Week, Handicapped Awareness has a booth in the Wilkinson Center Stepdown Lounge where students can try moving about in a wheelchair.

Those interested should sign up in the Student Community Services Office, 449 ELWC. Orientation meetings will be this month and the survey will be conducted in March, Miss Rogers said.

Scott Runia watches Utah's Scott Martin while directing the Cougars' offense in BYU's 90-76 victory over the Utes.

Runia steady guard, runs Cougar offense

By GORDON MONSON
Universe Sports Writer

BYU basketball standout Scott Runia is a quiet, controlled competitor who lets his skills do the talking, not his mouth.

"I'm quiet, but very competitive," said Runia. "I don't like to show my emotions on or off the court and I always try to keep things under control. That way I'm more effective."

Effective is exactly what Runia has been all year. The talented guard is having his best season at BYU, averaging 10.3 points per game with four assists. He is a major reason the Cougars presently hold a share of the WAC lead.

Danny Ainge

When asked to comment on Runia's play, teammate Danny Ainge threw enough compliments at him to make anyone's mother smile. "Scott is a smart basketball player who doesn't make mistakes," Ainge said. "He is steady, unselfish, and one of the best shooters in the country. We work well together."

Playing basketball for BYU is important to Runia, and it's something he works very hard at. "I play every day. I don't know what life would be like without practicing basketball." You can bet those practice sessions are not always fun and games either. Ask Coach Frank Arnold.

Runia came to BYU following a successful career at West High School in Salt Lake City. His senior year he averaged 22 points per game and was named a prep All-American by the St. Petersburg Times.

"I originally wanted to go to the University of Utah, but I came to the Y because of the Church's influence. I like the atmosphere here. I also appreciate the BYU fans, they're great. Having the opportunity to play basketball for BYU is one of the greatest things that has happened to me. I consider being here a blessing."

No. 1 goal

Runia's No. 1 goal is for the Cougars to win the WAC title and move into the regional playoffs. He feels the Cougars' chances are good. "It won't be easy, but I'm confident we can win the WAC and go farther."

Winning is what Runia is good at and there are few things the 6-1 junior enjoys more. "When we go out and play well and win, then I feel great. It's a great feeling to win because we work so hard to do so. Whenever we lose I have a terrible feeling that doesn't leave until we win again." If the Cougars have their way Saturday night, Runia won't have to suffer that terrible feeling Sunday morning.

Cougars face Aztecs in first WAC meeting

The Cougars will welcome San Siego State to the WAC Saturday night when they meet the Aztecs for the first time in WAC competition.

The Aztecs are led by 6-11 Steve Malovic. Malovic, a transfer from the University of Southern California, is a candidate for All-America honors. "He's a legitimate basketball player," said BYU coach Frank Arnold.

The Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association drafted Malovic after his junior year. "Steve is the key player in our season this year," said Aztec coach Tim Vezie.

Malovic doesn't carry the team by himself. Kim Goetz, known as the "Long Ranger" because of his consistent outside shooting ability, led SDSU in scoring last season. "If there is a finer perimeter shooter on the West Coast," said Vezie, "I have yet to see him."

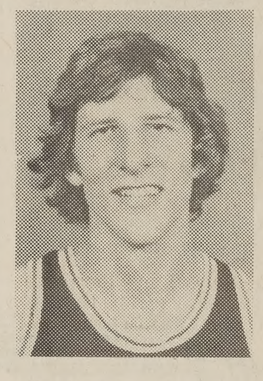
The Cougars are coming off a loss to Wyoming and are counting on a win over the Aztecs to keep them in the lead in the WAC. San Diego State plays Utah in Salt Lake City tonight and will have to face BYU without the benefit of a day's rest.

Malovic is leading the WAC in free throw percentage with an average of .813. He is also the third leading scorer in the WAC in all games and Goetz is fourth in the league in WAC games only.

The Cougars have not lost in the Marriott Center this year. Before the season began, BYU was rated by the Gold Sheet as having a five point home advantage. The national average was six points. At Friday's Chalk Talk Arnold said BYU has now been given an eight point advantage, which he said was the best in the nation.

The Aztecs are currently in third place in the WAC and could take a share of the lead if they swept this road series. San Diego State, though, has won only one game on the road this year (against San Francisco) and BYU has yet to be defeated at home. Utah has lost only two games at home in the last 24.

Next week BYU takes to the road against New Mexico and Texas-El Paso, while San Diego State will be at home to greet Colorado State and Wyoming.



Drafted last year by the Phoenix Suns of the NBA, Steve Malovic elected to stay at San Diego State and play in the WAC his senior year.

Women cagers home for two crucial games

Home sweet home. BYU women's basketball settles down into the friendly confines of the Smith Fieldhouse this weekend. The women's team hosts Texas-El Paso Friday and New Mexico State Saturday in a pair of crucial conference clashes.

The Cougars, taking a page from Ringling Brothers, have faced hometown crowds only three times this season in their first 14 outings. That situation will be reversed the remainder of the season, as the team plays seven of the remaining 10 contests in Provo.

For BYU, the weekend games represent a must-win situation. The Cougars, 2-2 in league action and 7-7 overall, have lost all they can afford in conference play, according to head coach Courtney Leishman.

Saturday's game against New Mexico State will bring a team sporting six returning players from last season ar[d] five junior college transfer players.

Sophomore sensation Tina Gun[n] continues to show improvement wi[th] each succeeding game. Gunn will [be] hard pressed, however, to improve [on] last Saturday's record shattering [41] point performance against No. [1] ranked Nevada-Las Vegas. A Cougar supporter goes for the gusto as he cheers the team on to victory. General consensus of team and players shows the crowd does make a difference.

Crowds make the difference

Once upon a time, in a place called Happy Valley, a huge events center was built to house thousands of wildly spirited fans who loyally supported their teams. But alas, a wicked gremlin cast an evil spell over the building, and most who entered were struck with a decapacitating disease called "Fair Weather Fan Fever."

Then into the blue came Coach Frank Arnold and his dashing young knights of the round ball. With sparkling promises of the first winning season in four years and an undefeated home record, the men in blue were able to stir Cougar fans from their lethargy, and it appeared that the evil gremlin had been banished from the Marriott Center at long last.

Arnold is elated with the turn of events at the sports center. "At our last home game (against New Mexico) we had the best crowd since I've been here at BYU," he said, mentioning that the crowd supported not only offense, but defense as well.

"It's unique and a big help when our crowd shows appreciation for good defense like they did at the last home game," forward Steve Trumbo agreed.

There were even some fans who carried the participant role at the last home game to an extreme, and felt cheated when Marriott Center officials discouraged them from booing and raising signs.

"Booing and jeering at the refs are all part of the game," said one irate fan. "They're as American as mom's apple pie." But is there any truth to this statement? President Oaks doesn't think so, as he exemplified in his statement, "Let BYU be known as the place where the Cougars never lose and the fans never boo."

The players don't seem to need the booing either, as Danny Ainge summed up when he said, "Fans shouldn't be negative. What we need is extra volume, but not that kind."

The BYU pep squad is working on other ways for the crowd to unite and vent their feelings. Their most recent gimmicks are the "Victory Flickers," or Cougar festooned scarves with printed instructions on uniform ways to use them in specific situations: These, it is hoped, will provide a way for fans to show united visual spirit, since posted signs have been outlawed by an NCAA policy. The pep squad welcomes any other suggestions to unite students in support of the team.

But fan participation isn't limited to the game itself. The crowd can work its magic on the Cougar squad even before the tipoff. In fact, several players think that can be the most crucial time for crowd support. Center Alan Taylor said "The crowd is especially important before and at the beginning of a game. We really notice the fans during warmups."

Ainge agreed with Taylor, saying. "The fans help a player get ready — psyched for the game. A player begins preparing for the game a week ahead of time, but the crowds can really help to get him up during warmups."

The coaches and players all agree that fan support can be the decisive factor in any game, and a major ingredient of victory. "We need everyone yelling when we make a good play." Ainge said. "The emotional lift is there when the crowd makes noise. It makes us play harder. We make a good play. The fans are a big motivation and we need their support."

Wrestler Hansen fractures elbow

BYU's top ranked wrestler, Brad Hansen, will have to curb his activities for the rest of the season because of a fractured left elbow that was only recently diagnosed. The only scheduled match in which Hansen will participate in the near future will be the East West Invitational on Feb. 6, where Hansen will face Mark Churella for the number one national ranking at 167 pounds.

Hansen will be out for an undesignated period of time. He said he is experiencing little pain, a fact which was evidenced when he pinned Bill Brasseth on the way to a 37-12 BYU defeat of Boise State Wednesday night.

In that match, Cougar teammates Ed Maisey, 134 pounds, and Donnie Owen, 158 pounds, also scored pins. Joining them in the winners circle were BYU's Brad Anderson, 118 pounds; Craig Prete, 142 pounds; Jerry Dodge, 150 pounds; and Billy Boyd, 166 pounds.

'World of Dance'

Dance concert dazzling

By DIANNA J. GREER
Universe Staff Writer

A dazzling kaleidoscope of color, music and movement twirled before a deJong Concert Hall audience in last night's opening performances of "World of Dance."

Flashing strobes beat brilliantly to open the dance concert as the forever-smiling Cougarettes rocked out to a disco medley of sharp precision.

Continuing with the "hot city disco", the Ballroom Dance team let there hair down in an excellent performance of West Coast Swing.

The International Folk Dancers provided a change from the American disco with their softly lit, gay folk dance of the Ukraine. "Tanetz" was a pleasantly enjoyable experience.

The color, flowers, ribbons and costuming along with a human maypole all blended to give a well-received number.

The program was sprinkled with three modern dance numbers. Each of these creative dances, "Very Vivaldi", "Recess", and "Slip Slidin" was previously performed in "Dance in Concert" earlier this year.

"With Love" danced to the music of Nadia's Theme, was gracefully expressed by the Theatre Ballet. The soft subtle dancing and costuming harmonized well with the light music. Beautifully staged, the triple duo number was effectively accented by soft spot lighting.

In honor of Virginia Tanner, (founder of the BYU Children's Dance Co.), ten darling little performers danced merrily to the music of "Baby Bunting". The barefoot little girls skipped and twirled in full pastel nightgowns like puffy clouds to the delight of the audience.

This classy number, done the way dancing used to be ended just like its name, cheek to cheek.

A second tap dance brought you back to the days of the show boat. Tambourines, and top hats added to this production number, which no show would be complete without. The group of twenty-two dancers demonstrated good stage presence and impressive unity for a group of its size.

The most impressive dance, though, was the finale, a Spanish dance started by the ballroom dance team, an interlude done by a dramatic near-professional soloist (of the quality one might find in the Puerta del Sol section of Madrid), and satisfyingly followed up by the folk dancers.

BYU's "World of Dance" is always a treat. Last night's performance was simply one more testament to BYU's dominance of an art form for which it is already internationally noted.

'Non-preferred have plans

By DIANNA J. GREER
Universe Staff Writer

Someone out there doesn't think that Winter Preference is the "biggest dance event of the year" — over 20,000 someones, as a matter of fact.

According to the ASBYU Social Office, 4,000 tickets are availible for the two nights of "girl's choice" dances, yet barely three-quarters of those had been sold as of Thursday afternoon. That means either some 20,000 BYU students have other plans or have taken up celibacy.

What are these folks going to do those nights? They can't all fit into the Varsity Theater and everyone's been to Temple Square, so...

Several students, randomly interviewed as they dined in the luxury of the Cougareat, had a few interesting plans for the weekend.

"I'm going to hop a Greyhound to Vegas" commented one student. Others had intentions ranging from night skiing at Sundance to visiting the "Reveen Hypnotist Show" at Provo High School.

This weekend is supposedly the opportunity for BYU's 10,000 plus female population to do the asking. But less than one third of the BYU coeds are taking the plunge. Why?

Kim Snow, a sophomore in Interior Design from Fair Oaks, Calif., said she and her roommates would be having an apartment slumber party instead of attending the gala event.

"Bob hasn't been asking me out so I'm not going to ask him to Preference," said Allison Bradshaw, also of Fair Oaks.

Others apparently were turned down, couldn't find anyone to ask, or simply didn't have the desire to go. So where does that leave the thousands of unasked men on campus?

Doug Erekson, of Billings, Mont., a junior in Theater and Cinematic Arts, said he will be strolling the ELWC with an ad board soliciting a date.

Some other plans of "unpreferred males" include going on a blind date to Salt Lake City, spending the evening in the ceramic studio, watching the basketball game, and attending a branch Hawaiian party.

Another student simply plans to stay home and stare at the walls.

A few daring gents on campus have decided to breaks the norms and take matters into their own hands. "I've got two dates for the weekend" said Jim McCune, a medical technology major from Nyssa, Oregon.

Whatever the case, if you carry an "unpreferred" label this weekend, there are many things you can choose to do. If the previous ideas don't suit your fancy, perhaps you might want to try one of the following suggestions.

1. Start a bottle cap collection.
2. Read Crime and Punishment or War and Peace.
3. Write dirty notes and send them to all the girls you've taken out in the past month.
4. Watch the Barretta re-run at 10:30 Friday night.
5. Have a bachelor's party.
6. Go golfing at midnight.
7. Dress in a rabbit suit and go dance hopping.
8. Go jump in a lake.
9. Climb "Y" mountain.
10. Ask a girl to Preference.

'Supertrain' new TV show

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The last time television had a series about a train, it was called "The Iron Horse."

Puffing billows of black smoke, the old steam locomotive of the Buffalo Pass, Scalplock and Defiance Rail Road chugged across the screens in 1966.

The newest railroad series, on NBC, is called "Supertrain," and the train not only is from a different era but looks like it comes from a different world. Somebody ought to tell Amtrak about this.

"Supertrain" is a super-sleek, super-fast, atomic-powered, double-decked streamliner with all the accouterments — swimming pool, gym, disco, and medical center — of a luxury hotel.

NBC, in its publicity, refers to the train as the "star" of this anthology series featuring different guest stars each week. Grumbles executive producer Dan Curtis, "Put the train out with no scripts and no actors and see how long it lasts. The train is terrific, but it's only the ambience."

"Supertrain" premieres Wednesday with a two-hour movie, then returns the following Wednesday to begin its weekly run as a one-hour series. The pilot movie was still being edited and was not available for preview.

"They asked me to do a series about a big train with all kinds of fancy things," Curtis says. "It was to be a combination of suspense, mystery and comedy. That was it."

In all, Curtis estimates more than $9 million was sunk into the sets, miniatures and early shows. He says by comparison ABC's "Battlestar Galactica" is "Mickey Mouse."

New baby for poet

(AP)-Soviet poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko has a new son, the Royal Victoria Hospital said Thursday.

The 7-pound baby, named Alexander, and his 25-year-old British-born mother "are doing well," the hospital in this south coast resort said Thursday.

The birth in England means Alexander will have dual British and Soviet nationality. Yevtushenko, 45, met his wife, Jan, when she was studying Russian literature at Moscow State University and she became his translator and personal assistant. They married last April.

'Charlie Brown' held over for 'family night' in Orem

The Orem Civic Theater production of You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown will be held over until Monday because of popular demand, according to Carol Hertford, theater director for the production.

"Last Monday was all sold out," she said, "and we decided to hold it over one more time for family home evenings."

The play, based on the Charles Schultz comic strip "Peanuts," is the first production for the newly formed Orem Civic Theater.

The production, which includes several BYU students, opened Jan. 19 and has been held over twice because of its popularity.

Seating is limited at the theater, which is situated inside the Orem City Center at 56 North State Street. Advance reservations are available by calling 224-5070.

Tickets for the production may also be purchased at the door. General admission is $3.00, tickets for students with activity cards are $2.00, and for children under 12, $1.00.

Non-LDS club plans young adult program

While LDS students are attending Young Adult activities with their wards, non-LDS students will be attending activities with other non-LDS students.

The "Non-Mormon Association" is a new organization which has been approved as a formal club on campus.

'Gentile' morals

"We've all heard the Mormon who says he avoids the standards and morals of a 'gentile' world by attending Young Adult activities," said Nicholas A. D'Orazio, a junior from Wilmington, Del. and spokesman for the club. "Well, we thought we'd like that kind of protection too. We all need to retain our differences and not let the social scene we happen to be in determine our beliefs."

Faculty advisors for the club are George W. Pace, associate professor of church history and doctrine and John S. Staley, BYU professor of sociology.

The club was organized last semester by interested students who met to form policies and choose advisors.

While club members were waiting for approval, members of the faculty and administration contributed assistance and advice for the organization.

BYU Pres. Dallin H. Oaks and Gary H. Carver, spokesman for the Office of Student Life, worked with the students. Final approval for the organization was given by J. Elliot Cameron, dean of student life.

"It's up to the leaders of the club members and the advisors to determine if the club will be a success," Cameron said.

Bad vibrations

D'Orazio said, "The future all depends on student support. We've had bad vibrations from some students. Vandalism of signs has been the worst so far. Even some non-LDS students think we're anti-Mormon."

But, D'Orazio added, "If half the non-Mormons here support the club, it will be one of the largest clubs ever at BYU. "The club will also be referred to as the Young Adult Program for non-Mormons."

Small effort pays off

Engineering principles used to identify and overcome scientific problems can also be used to solve problems which occur in daily life, scientist Donald Friedman told students at an engineering seminar Thursday.

Friedman, who helped design the Lunar rover which explored the surface of the moon, told his audience that he has found that "90 percent of any task can be accomplished by using only 10 percent of the total energy required to complete the task," Friedman said. This principle is used by his company to maximize the greatest possible returns for the least effort.

"Another important point to remember is success is not only dependent on your work effort, but also on your manager's impression of your effort," Friedman said.

graduate student granted ull Japanese scholarship

BRAD BURTON

A BYU student has been awarded a fellowship from The Ministry of Education of Japan.

Brad Burton, a recent Cum Laude graduate from the BYU Japanese department, is the recipient of the Monbu-sho scholarship. The scholarship will cover all his educational expenses plus $750 per month during a two-year period in Japan. Burton will be studying Japanese business and Asian studies.

"The government will choose, from the many major universities in Japan, the one which I will attend," he said.

Burton, a returned missionary form the Sendai Mission in Japan, said he hopes he will be placed within the boundries of his mission.

He is currently in his first year of the MBA program and teaches a Japanese class for returned missionaries.

Elections open house

The ASBYU Election Committee will hold open houses for students who want to be candidates in the next ASBYU elections. The first will be Monday and Tuesday in the reception center ELWC, to familiarize students about becoming ASBYU candidates. The second open house will be on the fourth floor ELWC. Current ASBYU officers will conduct an issues and answers session, Tuesday from 12-1p.m., in the reception center ELWC.

Y justice approved

A new member of the ASBYU Supreme Court was approved at Thursday's Executive Council meeting, while the approval of a second nominee to fill the five-member court was reportedly postponed in light of yesterday's court injunction against the firing of ASBYU Attorney General Kirk Cullimore.

Dennis Judd, a junior in political science from Coalville, Utah, was unanimously approved as a Supreme Court justice. Judd had previously served as a student defender and as chairman of the Utah Intercollegiate Assembly.

ASBYU President Perry Bratt said Wednesday afternoon that Judd and John Chaffen, a graduate law student from Salem, Ore., and former ASBYU attorney general, would both be approved as justices at the weekly meeting Thursday.

1979 Graduates Computer Science/Electrical Engineers

There are professional opportunities on a large scale at NCR-San Diego.

You'll find the facilities impressive: extensive buildings that cover a whole hilltop overlooking one of California's most attractive living and recreational areas.

Even more impressive is our aggressive leadership in computer technology. From the advanced work of professionals here, two new NCR divisions have been generated.

NCR/SD is engaged in the design and construction of large-scale computer systems embodying powerful new concepts: virtual systems . . . firmware emulation . . . PASCAL-based OS language . . . VLSI technology . . . and other advanced developments.

The work we do has a strong impact on NCR's market position, provides high visibility for professional achievement, and offers experience in the new computer technologies that we are using to anticipate business EDP needs in the 80's.

Although our products and facilities are large-scale, we work in small project teams with easy interdisciplinary communication. Movement between projects is also easy, so you get wide exposure to a diversity of programs of varied size and scope. New grads can find the best career path among an ample number of available options.

In short, we give you the best of both worlds: the stimulation of working with top professionals at one of NCR's principal computer development and manufacturing facilities, an exciting career-accelerating environment; and a chance to enjoy beautiful San Diego . . . where the off-job living is vacation-like all year long. We look forward to briefing you on our immediate openings in the following areas:

OPPORTUNITY AT BS AND MS LEVELS

Important, continuing commercial activity in:

HARDWARE DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT
Perform design, checkout and documentation for state-of-the-art computing equipment; coordination from specifications of a logical sequence of components and circuitry for a desired computer output; design of circuitry and logic for high-speed computers and systems. Additional opportunities to perform design of test equipment to check out computer systems. Candidates should be interested in logic and circuit design. For EE graduates.

SOFTWARE PROGRAMMING
Origination, design, development and implementation of complex software systems; development of original functional design and processing techniques; design and implementation of state-of-the-art data base/file management software and a large-scale on-line multiprogramming executive design, flowcharting, coding and implementation of on-line executive software modules. For EE, Computer Science or Math graduates.

FIRMWARE DEVELOPMENT
Positions requiring EE or CS degree to organize and implement firmware programs to emulate computing systems; creative use of existing computer logic for automatic diagnosis of hardware malfunctions; develop programs to automate manufacturing procedures, simulate electronic circuit response and simulate logic fuctions.

Positions also for EE's in

Speed law worthwhile without federal strings

Despite decreases in traffic fatalities when cars travel at slower speeds, some states now want to increase their legal speed limits from 55 to 65 miles per hour. Just last week the Wyoming legislatue passed such a bill, and 11 other states have similar measures in their hoppers which fly in the face of the national 55 mph legal limit. In the wake of the bill's passage, Wyoming Governor Ed Herschler was told in no uncertain terms by Department of Transportation Secretary Brock Adams that the Cowboy State stands to lose $80 million in federal highway-aid funds.

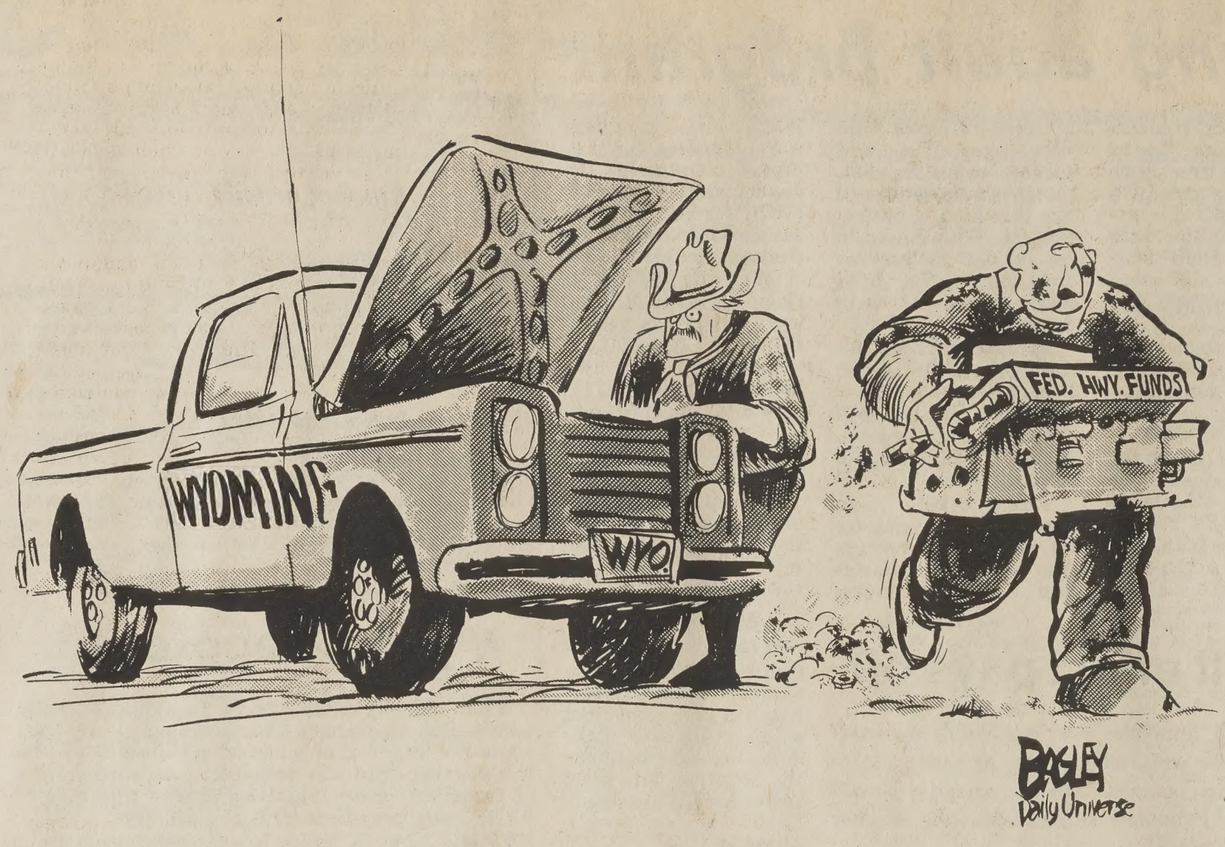
This so-called "blackmail" puts an ackward twist to what many consider a good and life-saving regulation. Adherance to the 55 mph speed limit law at first resulted in fewer accidents and deaths, but fatalities on the highways are creeping back up to pre-55 levels as more and more motorists seem to be ignoring the law.

We agree with the 55 mph speed limit and the benefits brought about by our adherance to that law, but we feel its enforcement should not be left to the federal government.

Wyoming's potential sacrifice of $80 million demonstrates an ironical switch of "purse-strings" power. Once upon a time, the federal government was controlled by the money allotted it by the taxpayers. Somehow, the tables turned, and now the taxpayers are being controlled by the money held over their heads by the federal government.

Allotment of highway funds should have nothing to do with speed limit enforcement. The federal government does not own the highways nor does it patrol them. A two-cent-per-gallon federal excise tax is demanded of drivers, yet repayment to the states is refused unless certain rights are sacrificed. This is representative of an increasing arrogance in federal regulatory policies.

We believe the 55 mph speed limit should be kept as it is in Utah, but that's our legislature's decision to make, not Uncle Sam's.



"Now you can go just as fast as you want . . ."

Washington dug own hole; federal hiring policy chaos

In recent years Uncle Sam has been portrayed as the wise but scolding parent who, having discovered right, dutifully admonished his charges for wrong, and sought to point out truth.

He was particularly concerned about the nature of the work force, insisting on equality for minorities, veterans and women. He never let up; his aides spent millions of hours studying the job statistics.

And they enforced their views: The Attorney General, the housing, education, health, labor, commerce secretaries, the Census Bureau, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and others, laid down the law.

And now comes Sears, Roebuck and Co., saying in effect that Uncle Sam's very own efforts created the workplace he now declares is inequal, and that Uncle Sam is fighting none other than himself.

The stunning accusation is contained in a class action suit against Uncle Sam by Sears, in which it claims the government created the white male-dominant workforce through its various regulations.

It named the G.I. Bill of Rights, veterans preference laws, selective service, and restrictions on the number of women and blacks in the armed services and in vocational and educational programs.

And then says Sears, it blames us and other employers who attempted to live up to the law and, with growing frustration, to the sometimes conflicting opinions make by all those aides in all those offices.

Among other things, the suit seeks to have Uncle Sam himself live up to his laws, and to tell Sears and other retailers how to resolve conflicting obligations.

Sears feels it was unfairly charged with violating the law. It maintains it has led other companies, and even anticipated Uncle Sam, in employing veterans, women, and minorities.

In spite of a government legacy of discrimination, Sears says its own employment files show that employment of blacks, minorities and women rose sharply between 1965 and 1973, and even more sharply since then.

The government, it said, failed to enforce civil rights laws intended to provide industry with a well-qualified workforce, and that it then "blamed private employers for the government's failures."

It seeks court orders to "prohibit the use against employers of any statistical disparities from the civilian labor force traceable to compliance with veterans acts and the Age Discrimination Act."

Sears is angry, insofar as a corporation can become angry, and to the extent that the cold legalese of a complaint can convey it. Uncle Sam did it, Sears says, and now he pontifically blames us.

Cigarette tax increase needed for Utah

Despite what the nation's tobacco industry would have us believe, it is widely known, by experts no less, that a significant link exists between smoking and certain kinds of cancers.

Because of these health factors, economic considerations, the nuisance caused by public smoking and various other reasons, legislatures in all 50 states have imposed various levels of excise taxes on the sale of cigarettes.

Besides being a minor economic deterrant to smoke, cigarette taxes have traditionally helped to fund activities such as cancer research, which studies say ultimately benefit smokers more than non-smokers. As viewed by others, the tax is the price paid for an activity generally considered harmful by society. That price, depending on the state, runs from $.02 to .21 per pack.

Utah's eight-cent excise tax is sadly one of the lowest in the nation. Only North and South Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky, four "tobacco-belt" states, have lower cigarette taxes. Wyoming and Alaska share Utah's 8-cent level.

A bill proposing a two-cent per pack increase will soon be considered by the Utah Legislature. Backers of the measure point out that the seemingly sharp 25 percent increase will not even bring Utah up to the national cigarette tax average. The additional funds gained from the tax would be mainly earmarked for enforcement of Utah's Indoor Clean Air Act, a statute now widely ignored and disobeyed. In dollars and cents, the increase will result in about $1.3 million more than the $7.7 million currently being collected annually, should the level of smoking remain somewhat constant.

Should the bill be passed, and the increased enforcement secured, Utah will undoubtedly meet the same sticky questions facing other states: ones of rights and privileges, both for smokers and non-smokers.

Hopefully, the Utah Legislature will stick to the straightforward economic issue at hand which is: Can Utah use the additional funds gained from the excise tax in a useful manner? "Useful manner" means additional revenue for a variety of social programs, in addition to the one enforcing the clean air statute.

The fruits of last year's two-cent per gallon gasoline tax hike are already appearing in many parts of the state. The cigarette tax increase would have a similar favorable effect, and should be adopted by the legislature.

Court rulings take parental responsibility

Years ago, children belonged to their parents. Parents had certain responsibilities. They made decisions about castor oil, coughs and doctors and evaluated scrawled penmanship on Chief tablets.

No longer. It seems that parents have very little choice in what happens to their children these days. The courts make most of the decisions.

Three-year-old Chad Green is dying of leukemia in Plymouth, Mass. His parents want him to receive the controversial drug laetrile. The courts said no and threatened to take custody of Chad, demanding he receive the traditional, yet not thoroughly proven chemotheropy treatments. As a result the child's parents fled to Mexico to continue the treatment they thought best for their son.

In Boise, Idaho, Lynnae Moyer is about to lose her two children to the courts because she is an epileptic. Even after a doctor testified that the disease would not prevent the mother from taking proper care of her two-year-old and four-year-old daughter, she is being denied custody.

And then there was the case of Joe Singer.

Where will it end? It seems that slowly and subtly the courts are making parents mere figure-heads of their families — necessary only for food and lodging.

It is essential that the rights of children be protected. The courts must be able to require that children receive the education they deserve, whether at home or in the public school system. They must also protect those children whose parents are incapable of making decisions or are depriving them of guarenteed freedoms.

But a balance is needed.

The court system has tremendously decreased the amount of child abuse through intervention in the family system. However, this influence should not be permitted to replace parental decision-making responsibilities of parents.

Balance is technical. We need to stand back and take an objective view of exactly how much court control of the family should be allowed — what is proper and what is improper. If careful consideration is not given to the issue we may soon wake up and realize that we're not only excluded from decisions over castor oil and chemotherapy, but over valuable issues — like choosing to believe in God.

Letters to the Editor

A critic of a critic of a...

Editor:

I am tempted to do a critique of the critique of the critique (and its prominent place in the Universe), but I doubt that much would be gained. I think it is necessary to point out that actors do not get too upset over reviews because they understand that they are written from a personal standpoint. They try to learn from them. Perhaps writers are not of that ilk.

If there is any fault to be found, as Bro. Jolley said, it should be aimed at the teachers who have not taught how to critique. Whether or not you agree with what is written, Miss Woodbury had the right, and obviously the assignment, to critique A Conversation Piece. Each man (woman) has a right to his opinion.

Communism

Editor:

I noted with some interest the clever juxtaposition on your last editorial page of one piece denouncing the possible resurrection of moribund German Nazism with another advocating reapprochement with the all-too-healthy Chinese communists. Unclear in this interplay, however, is how one intelligently differentiates between these ideological forces in condemning the brutalities of one, while blithely overlooking the atrocities of the other. Can such a distinction be based upon a belated recognition of political realities as your one editorial implies, or it it merely a manifestation of a Munich mentality which cowers only before living dictators? A more probable hypothesis is that the matter is purely mercenary in nature. The State Department wants a foil for burgeoning Soviet power, and American businessmen lust after 900 million Chinese consumers. And into this snakes' pit of ambition go Donny and Marie, in full smile and song. One can only wonder how they stand to benefit from this affair.

In the long run, however, I suppose that it is all fair. Surely, if Nazi Germany had chosen not to externalize its agression and now stood ready to benefit the American government and business community, the Osmonds would find no moral difficulty in entertaining the Fuehrer or his successor (perhaps with a rousing rendition of "Hope of Israel" or "Shall the Youth of Zion Falter?").

Intramural test

Editor:

I was extremely amused by a letter to the editor that appeared in Wednesday's Universe. It seems to me that a couple of four-year high school varsity men should be able to pass off a simple Intramural basketball test. Of course, it probably would have helped if those gentlemen had read the High School Federation Rule Book. In it, they clearly define what a "held ball" and a "throw in" are.

As for BYU's "small intramural get-together," I understand that we are among the top three intramural programs in the nation, and that the intramural Office received around 500 basketball entries this semester. And I would be willing to bet that Mr. Gunner (significant?) and Mr. Reiche would be the first to yell if they were fouled in a game and the official missed the call.

I'm just a dumb girl, and didn't even play high school basketball, but I got a 92 percent on my first try on the test. Then again, I read the rules.

Cullimore did job well

Editor:

I am writing with regard to the recent removal of Kirk A. Cullimore for his position as ASBYU Attorney General. I worked as Kirk's senior assistant for the past five months and not only know that his character is outstanding, but that his work as the Attorney General was superior and far more effective than work in the office has been in the past.

He was always more than willing to answer anyone's questions and worked long hard hours without compensation, for the good of the University, only to be removed without a chance to face the accusations made against him. One should appreciate Kirk's example of excellence and good leadership. I feel both BYU and the students owe him thanks for improving a system which benefits any student who uses it.

I also feel an apology is owed to him for the unjust way in which he was removed from office. How can the Executive Council accuse him of misrepresentation of facts when they came up with no facts of their own? Maybe in the upcoming election we should be careful and choose studentbody officers who can discern between personality conflicts and a person who is efficient at his job.

Germany still democratic

Editor:

I am writing response to the Lee Warnick editorial of January 31 on the present rekindling of Nazism in West Germany. I feel it unfortunate that Mr. Warnick didn't do a little more homework on his subject than merely tuning in to "60 Minutes" this past Sunday. Although Mr. Warnick didn't come right out and say it, he eluded to the fact that the Nazi party is becoming once more a viable and vibrant part of many West German's existence. It was also stated that West Germans' have not learned their lesson from the "Holocaust."

I can assure Mr. Warnick, having served a mission in West Germany, that the vast majority of West Germans want nothing more than the continuation of their present social democratic system. An article in the February 1979 issue of Atlas World Press Review which states, "Some 30 years after its founding the Federal Republic of Germany is, by any standards, the most stable among the major states of Western Europe." There are certain fringe elements in West Germany, no doubt, who advocate neonazism. We too have our fringe elements, or have you forgotten the Klu Klux Klan and its popularity in some areas of the country?

Although the American people did much evil in subjecting free black Africans to decades of slavery, we have not been able to eradicate prejudice and bigotry among our people, or even among many Mormons. Neo-nazism will never become so influential and widespread in West Germany, as is racial prejudice and hatred in the United States today.

The coach knows rust!

Editor:

It saddens me to see a situation where a BYU coach can be bought with money to endorse a commercial product.

Being an alumni who takes BYU basketball a little more seriously than is perhaps normal, I was disappointed last Saturday night to again hear Frank Arnold endorsing an auto finishing service during the Wyoming pre-game show. One minute Coach Arnold was telling about his game strategy, the next he was telling listeners where to buy rust proofing for their cars.

College athletics, especially at BYU, should be on a different plane than professional athletics where players and coaches will endorse almost anything for money. To many of us BYU basketball is more than just a game. It's a matter of honor and glory, and every time there's a tip-off, the reputation of the school and the Church is on the line. While living in Provo last year my stake semi-annual priesthood meeting was cancelled because it conflicted with a BYU basketball game! Apparently many of the brethren in the priesthood have values similar to mine.

I'm sure many of us would be disappointed if President Kimball were to endorse toothpaste during a general conference broadcast. That's the way I feel when Coach Arnold endorses auto finishes.

I urge sympathetic readers to clip this letter, write "I agree" in the margin, and send it to Frank Arnold, care of the athletic department at Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602, in hope the commercial endorsements will stop.

Consolation disco dance

Editor:

Cold showers, cold soup, and putting my make-up on in the dark for several days is what I went through while participating in a campus-wide energy conservation contest for Heritage Halls. Much to my surprise, the girls of Heritage won and were awarded consolation dance compliments of ASBYU.

On top of the fact that I nearly died when I saw my face in the light, I was then informed the night before the dance that it was cancelled. Consequently, all the girls had to cancel their dates, which went over like a lead balloon.

Randy Gleave and Bob Bellus, two full-time BYU students, were also disappointed, considering that they were victims of the cancellation. They went together with the manager of Sound Palace, and knocked around the idea of giving Heritage Halls the dance they deserved.

After much convincing on the part of Gleave and Bellus, they were successful. As if that weren't enough, they prepared some sensational entertainment much to the pleasure of a packed house.

The point I'm trying to convey is that we should be more giving of our time for the betterment of our university. It should be our responsibility as individuals to have enough incentive to work together as a whole to help BYU reach its greatest potential. From myself, and a lot of the girls in the Heritage Halls, a special thanks to Randy Gleave and Bob Bellus for their emplifying the standard of ASBYU.
